Black Venus

Gianna Carrano Suné

The contemporary Venus is wrapped in a plastic veil against the background of black rocks in a world that appears dark. The sea foam from which it emerges is not transparent, there are no cascades of flowers and veils of embroidered silk around her like those surrounding Botticelli's Venus. There are no gentle wind zephyrs, Nature has changed but she takes its strength from the earth and she is reborn as a chrysalis to make change and celebrate metamorphosis. The new Venus, the black Venus, will know how to renew and transform the world around it.

'BLACK VENUS' Alludes to the resolution of the 2030 Agenda of the United Nations on the theme of sustainable development of the middle environment with the conviction that women, the new Venuses, will play a decisive role in pursuing possible solutions.
